

Jungle Friends: Meeting the Need

We know you care about the Jungle Friends monkeys. Because of YOU we have rescued and rehabilitated over 100 monkeys, who are living in our compassionate care. These stories are just a few of our successes — and there will be more. The demand for sanctuary homes for monkeys keeps growing — and with your help, so do we!

Please Sponsor A Monkey today! If you are already one of our loyal sponsors, please consider upgrading to the next level. Your ongoing contributions provide food, shelter and loving care for the monkeys day after day, month after month, year after year.

Goober and Fio — two monkeys worlds apart...

Goober was born in his native land and stolen from his home and family when he was just a youngster. Goober was sold into research where he spent nearly 20 years in a tiny cage — all alone.

Fiona was born in America only to be stolen from her mother's arms and sold. Fiona had her babies stolen from her year after year. Fortunately fate brought these two monkeys together at Jungle Friends Primate Sanctuary.

It was love at first sight for Fiona...she knew what she wanted and she wanted Goober!

Roadside Zoo Shut Down

Monkers, a juvenile capuchin, was rescued from a bankrupt roadside zoo, along with her sister Zumie, and a nursing mother and infant.

The monkeys were anesthetized to be transported to Jungle Friends. When mama monkey woke up, she rejected her baby, who was only a few months old.

Jungle Friends staff bottle fed the baby and cared for his physical needs... and little Monkers stepped up to provide monkey nurturing.

Monkers appointed herself as his new little mom — carrying him, grooming and playing with him. It is wonderful to see the loving bond grow between these two young monkeys.

In Memory of Jimmy Sr.

Jimmy Sr. lived with the abuse from an organ grinder on the streets of New York for 20 years, and then for another 20 years he was confined in a pet store on display. He was confiscated and brought to Jungle Friends in 2001.

Jimmy didn't seem to notice his surroundings when he first arrived. We were told that he appeared to have gone mad — he was comatose. However, Jimmy did better than we could have ever hoped. Before long, Jimmy was having fun!

Jimmy met Chi Chi, an old circus gal and these two monkeys lived together happily for 10 years until his death. Jimmy spent his Golden Years at Jungle Friends, living into his 50s.

These, and many other monkeys found a new life at Jungle Friends. Unfortunately, many of the monkeys on our growing waiting list do not have time to "wait it out." If an appropriate home is not available within their time limit, they may be killed, sold, or passed to another undesirable situation.

Now, more than ever, we need your help. Please Sponsor A Monkey and change a life forever.

Jungle Friends is all about the monkeys.

Just some of the things we do to give the monkeys in our care the best possible life...

Building Habitats

We build large, outdoor habitats, complete with natural vegetation, which are designed to promote normal behaviors and natural enrichment.

Our monkeys have the room to climb, swing and play chase. They love picking their own bamboo for a snack, digging in the grass and dirt, and peeling bark from the trees and natural wood perches.

Our rescue of 25 monkeys from a roadside zoo required us to build six habitats at a total cost of more than $30,000!

Monkey sponsorships and the hard work of our volunteers will build more habitats for our ongoing Expansion Project to save more monkeys.

Monkey Care

The monkeys enjoy the companionship of other monkeys and receive loving, individualized attention from our dedicated staff and volunteers.

We prepare a variety of nutritious foods for the monkeys, which include special diets for our diabetics and toothless monkeys.

Diabetes in monkeys is caused by improper feeding and stress suffered before reaching Jungle Friends. Many of the 'pet' monkeys we rescue have had their teeth extracted.

Monkey care costs about $25,000 every month! Your monkey sponsorship provides food and care for the monkeys.

Veterinary Care

Here Dr. Martino and veterinary technician Lee Thiesen-Watt are performing a vasectomy on Sammy, one of our rescued monkeys. We vasectomize the males to prevent births.

During their stay, these amazing women performed vasectomies and blood tests on 31 of the Jungle Friends monkeys. For free!

Unfortunately, vet care is rarely donated. This past year our medical expenses would have totaled over $23,000!

Your medical sponsorship will promote the health and well being of the monkeys in our care.

We are good stewards of your kind support. In 2010 Jungle Friends applied 83% of all donations to the direct care of the monkeys. Only 12% went toward management and general expenses and 5% on fundraising expenses. 100% of monkey sponsorship donations are used for monkey care.

Rescued and Rehabilitated by Jungle Friends

Timmy and Dylan were victims of the exotic pet trade. Stolen from their mother monkeys' arms, they were sold illegally as pets. When they were confiscated, these baby capuchins were malnourished and could barely lift their tiny heads.

When baby monkeys are born, they naturally cling to their mothers. When Timmy and Dylan arrived at Jungle Friends, they were clinging to a stuffed animal and rocking — a sign of the emotional trauma they had already suffered. Baby monkeys need mother monkeys!

At Jungle Friends, Timmy and Dylan were welcomed into another group of monkeys. Monkers, a young adult, actually carries Dylan on her back and so does Zumie, an adolescent monkey. Both babies enjoy outlandish rough-and-tumble play with Mochi, another youngster.

It has been a heartwarming journey watching these babies turn into happy, healthy monkeys! Please sponsor Timmy or Dylan.
